Q1. 2 marks · Short answer

According to the passage, what lasting effects can war have on those left behind, including women and children?

Answer

War brings severe human suffering, and women and children left behind may carry trauma and indelible impressions on their minds. These lasting effects can shape their emotions and sense of safety.

Q2. 5 marks · Long answer

Anne Frank's diary records the miseries of war and her feelings of alienation and isolation. Explain how you might relate to these feelings, using the passage and your own understanding of the effects of war.

Answer

War can isolate people by taking away safety, freedom and ordinary human connection.

1. If I were living through war, constant danger and the loss of home could make me feel cut off from familiar people and secure routines. Like Anne, I might find it difficult to share my fears openly.

2. Fear, uncertainty and restrictions could deepen that loneliness; separation from friends or family would leave me without the comfort of their support. Anne's diary shows that a young person can face these feelings intensely, even while surrounded by others.

3. I would try to cope by writing down my thoughts, staying connected with trusted people whenever possible, and supporting others. These actions might not end the danger, but could help me feel heard and less alone.

War's effects are not only physical: trauma and lasting impressions can also shape people's emotional lives.

Q4. 5 marks · Long answer

Complete each sentence with the correct form or expression: “These dresses belong to you; they are _____”; “The fire caused serious _____ to the houses”; and “The board was _____ plans for the tournament.” Briefly explain your choices.

Answer

The correct choices are “yours,” “damage,” and “concerned with,” because each fits the sentence’s grammar and meaning.

1. The dresses belong to you, so “they are yours” uses the possessive pronoun “yours” to show ownership; “your” would need a noun after it.

2. The fire caused serious damage to the houses. “Damage” is an uncountable noun meaning harm or destruction, so it does not take a plural ending here.

3. The board was concerned with plans for the tournament. “Concerned with” means involved in or giving attention to the plans.

Thus, “yours,” “damage,” and “concerned with” are the grammatically and contextually correct completions.
