Answer

A political party is a group of people who come together to contest elections and hold power in the government. They agree on some policies and programmes for the society with a view to promote the collective good.

Q3. 3 marks · Medium answer

Name and briefly describe the three components of a political party.

Answer

1. Leaders provide direction to the party, shape its policies and decisions, and represent it in public and elections.
2. Active members work within the organisation, communicate its policies, organise campaigns, and help carry out party activities.
3. Followers support the party and its policies, participate in its activities, and may vote for its candidates.

Q4. 5 marks · Long answer

Explain the three components of a political party and how they together make up the party.

Answer

A political party consists of leaders, active members and followers who work together to seek popular support and influence government.

1. Leaders guide the party, shape its policies and decisions, and represent it in public and during elections. They help persuade people that the party's policies are better than those of other parties.
2. Active members carry out the party's work on the ground. They communicate its policies, organise campaigns and activities, and connect the leadership with people in the community.
3. Followers support the party and its policies. They take part in its activities and may support its candidates by voting for them in elections.

Together, these three components organise support, promote the party's policies and help it contest elections.
